Power plant protesters march for three days to reach Boston

Dangerous. Activists say the facility should not be operational.

A large group of activists marched from Plymouth to Boston over the course of three days, calling on the state to revoke Pilgrim Nuclear Power Plant's license on Tuesday.

The plant, they say, is too dangerous to remain operational.

"At a time when we are trying to adopt alternative energy plans, there are lots of alternatives to archaic facilities that put the public at risk," said former Gov. Mike Dukakis.

Dukakis started fighting the radiology emergency plans form both Pilgrim and Seabrook Nuclear Power Plant in Seabrook, New Hampshire, in the 1980s.

During the shutdown of Pilgrim from 1986 to 1988, Dukakis butted heads with the NRC and opposed the emergency plans which he and his administration said would not protect the public in the event of a core meltdown.

Sen. Dan Wolf, of Harwich, and the co-chair of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Labor and Workforce Development, said he was inspired by these efforts then and hope to further them now.

"This plant has been operating for 43 years on a 40-year life, and is licensed for 60 years," Wolf said.

"To be using 1960s technology in 2015 is a failure on multiple levels."

Quoted

"To be using 1960s technology in 2015 is a failure on multiple levels. This is not an energy policy issue — it's a public safety issue. We do not have a safe and rational approach."
Sen. Dan Wolf

In 2014, the Nuclear Regulatory Committee ranked Pilgrim among the nine worst performing nuclear power plants in the country when weighing in maintenance activities, spent fuel storage, safety and other risk factors.

Located 38 miles southeast of the city, Boston is well within the range of exposure in the event of a meltdown, but Cape Cod would bare the brunt of the radiation.

Activists from Occupy Hingham, Cape Downwinders and the Pilgrim Coalition marched the 54-mile walk, which they called the "March for Our Children" to the Gardener Auditorium, calling on legislators to close the plant.

Pilgrim shut down in January 2015 after two main transmission lines went down, but state officials said there were no safety hazards. It reopened to full capacity in late May after a 35-day shutdown.

The nuclear reactor in Pilgrim is a GE Mark I, the same type and age as the one in Fukushima that melted down in March 2011.

But Pilgrim was still granted a renewed license in 2012, a move former Attorney General Martha Coakley opposed, after Entergy Corporation said they made $70 million in investments, replacing the fuel in the reactor and other equipment upgrades.

There have been five power plant meltdowns in the last 34 years.

2.0 spread. Boston 2024 bid now proposes events across the state

The greater Boston area is known as a walking city, which was a significant selling point for the city's 2024 Summer Olympics bid, which promised to deliver "the most walkable Games in modern times."

But after several residents have told the organizers to take a long walk off a short pier, Boston 2024 unveiled a 2.0 plan that now spreads the events out all over the Bay State.

Those who stood to reap the benefits of hosting various events are all for it, much more so than many of the city's residents.

New Bedford scooped up the sailing events, originally slated for Boston Harbor, some 60 miles south of Boston, on June 4.

"The sailors who will be here nine years from now know that there is no better place, not just in Massachusetts, but in all of America to have the sailing events," Richard Davey said at the time of the announcement.

The skeet and trap shooting events were originally planned for Long Island in Boston Harbor, which used to house a homeless shelter. But the new plans set their sights on Billerica, 25 miles away from Boston.

There has been talk of shipping the rowing events out to Worcester or up to Lowell after it was determined that the Charles River did not meet Olympic regulations. Some towns where popular sports were born, like Holyoke, the birthplace of volleyball and Springfield, the birthplace of basketball, were also suggested. Out-of-state stadiums might host the baseball events and Fenway would host only the finals. NATE HOMAN

Woman found fatally stabbed in Peabody

Homicide. Police say Brandon Hoar stabbed his girlfriend in their Gates Road home.

Police respond Tuesday to the house in which a 55-year-old woman was stabbed to death. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A Peabody man confessed to murdering his longtime girlfriend in their Gates Road home on a quiet suburban street because he was trying to protect his granddaughter, it was revealed in a Boston court Tuesday.

Brandon Hoar, 59, was ordered held without bail on a first-degree murder charge for the stabbing death of 55-year-old Cheryl Young.

Police arrested Hoar on Tuesday morning after they found him sitting on his front steps with a phone in his hand. His granddaughter was inside the house with the dead body.

Authorities said he told them that he had killed Young because she had been screaming crazily at their granddaughter. Hoar said she suffered from bipolar disorder.

Police found Young's body on the living room couch. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

The granddaughter was removed from the home and was in the custody of the Department of Children and Families.

Hoar will return to court on July 16 for a probable cause hearing.

FDA

Trans fat ban doesn't mean you'll never eat it

Goodbye, trans fats. Well, mostly.

The Food and Drug Administration officially declared that partially hydrogenated oils, the main source of trans fats in processed foods, are no longer "generally recognized as safe" to eat.

Trans fats not only raise your levels of bad cholesterol, but they also lower your levels of good cholesterol. In the statement announcing its policy change, the FDA said it expects to cut rates of coronary heart disease and prevent thousands of fatal heart attacks annually.

Many companies have seen the writing on the wall — this change has been three years in the making — and have already begun to change their recipes. But food manufacturers will have three years to figure out how to make your French fries and cupcakes healthier.

But this ban doesn't mean trans fats will never be on your plate again.

The problem isn't the low levels of naturally occurring trans fats — it's the extent of their use in practically everything. Many restaurants fry their food in partially hydrogenated oil to keep down costs because it stays good longer than natural oils, packaged baked goods like crackers and cookies contain trans fats to keep their texture and ready-made frosting doesn't melt because of trans fats.

Trump barges into 2016 race for president

Only top 10. Trump's first big challenge is to make it into a Fox News GOP debate in August.

Real estate mogul and TV personality Donald Trump barged his way into the 2016 U.S. presidential election on Tuesday in a blitz of boasts, inflammatory comments and attacks on both fellow Republicans and President Barack Obama's administration.

Trump wallowed in political incorrectness as he insulted everyone from Mexican immigrants to Jeb Bush and U.S. ally Saudi Arabia in announcing his bid for the Republican nomination.

"I will be the greatest jobs president that God ever created," Trump predicted in a long, combative speech in the atrium of Trump Tower on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue.

The billionaire, widely seen as having almost no chance of winning the nomination, brings an outsized personality and a penchant for controversy to an unusually large group of Republicans vying for the presidency.

In highly provocative comments, Trump accused Mexico of sending rapists and other criminals to live in the U.S.

"They're sending people that have lots of problems and they're bringing their problems," he said. "They're bringing drugs, they're bringing crime, they're rapists, and some I assume are good people, but I speak to border guards and they tell us what we are getting."

Eleven other Republicans have announced they are running for the November 2016 election.

Trump hit out at Bush for backing the Common Core education initiative to set national education standards.

"Bush is totally in favor of Common Core. I don't see how he can possibly get the nomination. He's weak on immigration, he's in favor of Common Core. How the hell can you vote for this guy? You just can't do it."

Republican strategists and officials cringe at the thought of Trump grabbing attention away from the party's more serious candidates as it tries to win back the White House. REUTERS

Trump languishes in 12th place, ahead only of former New York Governor George Pataki, in a Reuters/Ipsos online poll of 13 Republicans who have either declared their candidacies or are likely to.

Three things to know

1 Six Irish visitors killed in California balcony collapse

An apartment balcony collapsed early on Tuesday near the University of California at Berkeley, killing six people, all believed to be visiting college students from Ireland, and injuring several others.

The victims, most if not all of whom were working in the San Francisco Bay area on temporary visas for summer vacation, had been celebrating a friend's 21st birthday when the tragedy occurred, according to Irish government officials in Dublin.

Pictures from the scene showed that the fourth-floor balcony gave way and pancaked onto the third-story balcony just beneath it at the Library Gardens apartment complex, about two blocks from the UC Berkeley campus across the bay from San Francisco. REUTERS

3 Amazon considering paying people to deliver packages: WSJ

Amazon is developing a mobile application that would pay ordinary people, rather than courier companies, to deliver packages en route to other destinations, the Wall Street Journal reported on Tuesday.

Amazon would enlist brick-and-mortar retailers in urban areas to store the packages, likely renting space from them or paying a per-package fee, the Journal reported, citing people familiar with the matter. REUTERS

Rachel Dolezal says she is black, felt that way since she was 5

TV interview. The day after she resigns NAACP post, Rachel Dolezal breaks silence on race scandal.

Rachel Dolezal / TWITTER

From early on in life, Rachel Dolezal said on Tuesday, she has been drawn to African-American culture and identified as black.

Even at the age of 5, Dolezal told NBC's Today, she felt different.

"I was drawing self-portraits with the brown crayon instead of the peach crayon," she told Lauer. "It was a little more complex than me identifying as black."

Dolezal, who has lived as a black woman but was outed by her parents as white, broke her silence in a 10-minute sit-down with Matt Lauer.

Quoted

"I've had to answer a lot of questions throughout my life." Dolezal

She admitted that she knew one day her past would catch up with her. Still, she has few regrets.

She cited her life work as further evidence that her self-identification as black (not African-American, she notes) is real.

Besides her NAACP work, she went to historically black Howard University and has taught in the Africana studies department of a local college.

In an interesting choice of words, she said: "I don't see why they're in such a rush to whitewash the work that I have done and who I am and how I have identified."

"My life has been one of survival," Dolezal went on.

"The decisions I've made along the way, including my identification, have been to survive."

She insisted that she will continue to fight for social justice.

Dana-Farber Works Hard to Address the Unique Challenges of Young Adults with Cancer

Dana-Farber's Karen Fasciano, PsyD and Phoebe Souza, LCSW, MPH

Cancer is the number one disease killer for people under the age of 40 and 72,000 young adults (ages 18- 39) will be diagnosed with cancer this year. Those who are diagnosed with cancer earlier in life face unique circumstances as they fight their disease.

Young adults with cancer often face very different challenges than those who were diagnosed as children or older adults. Many are pursuing an education, starting families or have young children, and have burgeoning careers that cancer disrupts. The Young Adult Program at Dana- Farber Cancer Institute is part of an international initiative to recognize and address the particular circumstances related to lifestyle, work, school, family life, and emotional development that young adults face when living with cancer.

"Young adults aren't expecting to get cancer," said Karen Fasciano, PsyD, director of the Young Adult Program at Dana-Farber. "They're at a time in their life when they're expecting to move forward and plan for their future. Many young adults feel like this experience can be quite isolating because their peers don't have the same experiences as they do."

Dana-Farber provides clinical services and programs that validate and support the needs of young adults with cancer.

These programs focus on:

- Easing the emotional burden of living and coping with cancer
- Empowering young adults to become active participants in their cancer treatment
- Providing emotional and social support in the form of educational workshops, conferences, opportunities to network with other young adults with cancer, and clinical mental health services

Through these programs young adults are made aware of — and have access to — programs provided through other offices, divisions, and departments within Dana-Farber.

Clinicians in the Psychosocial Oncology and Palliative Care Department at Dana-Farber, including psychiatrist, psychologists, and social workers, have specific expertise working with young adults and addressing issues such as the emotional challenges of adjusting to cancer diagnoses, communicating with peers and family, and building and maintaining intimate relationships. The Young Adult Program offers individual counseling, social networking tools, and events to help young adults and their caregivers cope with cancer.

That means you won't be seeing any photos with their faces anytime soon, so bad news for you, Obsessive Celebrity-Kid Watchers. (Wow, that sounds creepy.) "I just don't want 16 years from now to get, 'You are so disrespectful. You invaded, you exposed me and I wasn't ready.' Ever though they're babies and they're under our care, it's still their face," Saldana tells E! News. "Right now they're not in the position to speak for themselves or make a decision. "Breaking Bad" star Aaron Paul apparently wants to use his fame and social media moxie for evil, not good. He recently teased fans in a Periscope video about a "Breaking Bad" spinoff chronicling the exploits of his character, Jesse Pinkman, following his exit from Albuquerque. "I'm going to tell you all some news that I've been dying to tell you for some time," he offered. "Listen, there's some super top-secret news that I am so proud to tell all of you. It's very exciting." Except that it was all a lie. And fans got so worked up after it that he had to tweet an apology: "Sorry for the joke, everybody." Not cool, Pinkman. Not cool.

Anna Faris jealous of a dinosaur

Anna Faris is really trying to be an understanding wife to Chris Pratt, but she just doesn't like the way a certain "Jurassic World" co-star has been looking at him. In the record-breaking blockbuster, Pratt's character has a very close bond with one velociraptor in particular named Blue. How close of a bond? So close that Faris took to Twitter to voice her concerns. "Honey, what if I'm the littlest jealous of Blue?" she wrote. "I mean, she's hot, smart and you clearly adore her. Thoughts?" Pratt himself responded, hoping to put his wife's fears to rest. "She's a little cold-blooded for my taste," he tweeted. "But seriously, nothing happened." That's his story and he's sticking to it.

Oh man, the 'Deadly Adoption' teaser

Let's just bask in the bizarre, simple awesomeness that is the first official teaser for "A Deadly Adoption," the ridiculous Lifetime Original Movie that Will Ferrell and Kristen Wiig tried — and failed — to keep a secret. The clip doesn't tell us much about the movie itself, which still looks to be a "Funny or Die" sketch writ large — which is absolutely fine — but we do at least know that Wiig has a gun and Ferrell shouldn't be wandering around in the middle of the road like that. This is going to be great.

HuntingtonTheatre.org

Review. The Huntington’s latest treads a little too close to being all talk.

“After all the terrible things I do” is a nearly two-hour, two-person gabfest from the Huntington Theatre Company that could use a good editing and a bit of an edge.

Playwright A. Ray Pamatmat tackles the subject of bullying seemingly gay kids from a couple of potentially interesting angles, but the story tends to get lost in its own wordiness, at times meandering into Lifetime movie territory. Add a flimsy plot with big reveals you can figure out before you’re even comfortable in your seat, and you begin to look for distractions.

The most entertaining one comes courtesy of Clint Ramos’ superb set. The story unfolds in an independent bookstore that Ramos designed to include 1,500-plus books on shelves. When the action becomes dull, it’s fun to squint and see how many titles you can read. Many of them are current, which is an impressive attention to detail.

The store is owned by Linda (Tina Chilip), a divorced, Philippine immigrant living her version of the American dream. Daniel (Zachary Booth) is a recent college grad who has chosen to live with his mother in his childhood home while working at this bookstore for $7 an hour. From the moment they meet, it’s clear neither of them is telling the whole story, and the plot is essentially just their truths unfolding.

Chilip nicely reveals Linda’s discomfort through incessant movement and a subtle inability (or maybe refusal) to look at Daniel when speaking. Booth is equally impressive, though his inability to be comfortable in his own skin manifests with a somewhat detached demeanor and a distractingly incessant need to tuck his hair behind his ears.

The duo tug at your heartstrings while gradually revealing the raw edges of guilt and shame that own each of them. If only Pamatmat could find the words for their feelings.

Exploring the domestic side of the space race

Interview. JoAnna Garcia Swisher says life as an astronaut's wife was pretty complicated.

"The Astronaut Wives Club" premieres Thursday at 8 p.m. on ABC. / COOK ALLENDER, ABC

Movies like "Apollo 13" or the HBO miniseries "From the Earth to the Moon" have given modern audiences a taste of what it was like to experience the space race in the '60s. Daring astronauts, clever men on the ground, a race against the Soviets — it all makes for dramatic television. But there's another side to that time period: the women the astronauts left behind when they traveled. These wives were celebrities and, for many people, represented a very public face of happy marriage. Of course, behind the scenes, the story was a little different, and that's the story "The Astronaut Wives Club" seeks to tell. JoAnna Garcia Swisher stars as Betty Grissom, wife of Gus Grissom, and says despite the difference in eras, she found some unexpected parallels to her own life.

How does Betty react to her husband going into space?
It's obviously terrifying, but it's important to remember these women were military wives. Betty had to see her husband off to war before and that certainly had its own set of stressors and fears attached to it. They were very strong and very capable of handling the unknown and being prepared for the worst. In these particular circumstances, there were so many pressures that were put on them. When their husbands were sent off to war, they didn't have to keep a certain household in a certain way. It was a very real situation, so the addition of all of the expectations that were put on these women added to the complete fish-out-of-water experience, certainly for Betty. She definitely wasn't the most polished of wives. She was known for speaking her mind and saying her piece.

The show also has a lot of period details, like the food all the wives were serving.
Oh god. I don't even know how people survived back then. They're all very authentic recipes. Betty was a lover of creative foods. So I always looked forward to shooting launch parties or get-togethers because I was always interested to see what Betty would bring to the table.

Did you try some of it?
Oh absolutely, we ate and drank our way through the show, all of us. Whether we were on set or not. We shot the show in New Orleans and we all enjoyed what New Orleans had to offer.

There are definitely some creative meals served up.
Some meatloaf cupcakes — they were amazing.

What's in a meatloaf cupcake?
It's actually phenomenal. It's a muffin tin filled with meatloaf baked with a mashed potato icing topping and it is spectacular.

Real-life parallels

As someone who's been acting for a long time, did you identify with Betty's experience with the press?
Honestly, I related a lot to it as a baseball wife. It's a huge part of my life. I'm married to a baseball player [Nick Swisher]. I never knew that particular experience would ever directly apply to my career. But I do know what it's like to move to a new city because of your husband's job and rely on brand-new friends and brand-new women from all different places in the country and in the world with all different beliefs and ideology. Everyone has a different frame of reference, but you all come together to support each other because that's what you do. I really appreciate my friendships through that. Through the good and the bad and the highs and lows of your husband's career, you flock to each other and support each other. It's really hard to understand what it feels like if you're not in it.

Ikea hacks

Get creative with furniture staples from the popular Swedish furniture brand.

MARIANNE HAYES
@ MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Ikea just celebrated its 30th anniversary in the U.S. What better way to honor everybody's favorite ready-to-assemble furniture company than with a roundup of supercreative hacks?

We've scoured the Internet for the best DIY projects that turn generic pieces into furniture that wows.

Quirky "suitcase" dresser

This hack puts an eccentric twist on everyday decor. By swapping out boring old knobs for unique drawer pulls, it creates the illusion of stacked, vintage-style luggage.

"I love to travel, so I painted an Ikea Rast dresser to look like suitcases stacked together," says blogger Jen Crider of Girl in the Garage.

It's the leather scraps and old suitcase accessories that really give the finished piece some character.

How to pull it off:

1. Assemble the dresser and remove the drawers. Then stain everything but the doors.
2. Paint the doors any color you choose. (Applying wax afterward is optional.)
3. Swap in cool, luggage-style drawer pulls and glue on accessories like leather strips and gold accents.

Farmhouse-chic coffee table

You don't have to spend a fortune to incorporate this hot trend into your home. Blogger Natalie Dalpias of The Creative Mom cracked the code with this DIY coffee table upgrade.

"I love using rustic, charming, one-of-a-kind pieces of furniture," she says. "So when I needed a coffee table in my living room, I knew I wanted it to be a farmhouse-style coffee table. I used the Hemnes coffee table from Ikea and gave it a little facelift."

The best part? It only cost $10 in lumber and a few hours of work to create it.

How to pull it off:

1. Head to a local hardware store and pick up enough 1x4 wooden boards to cover the length of the table. (You may have to cut them, so measure the table beforehand.)
2. Stain the boards any color you choose, then apply wax for additional protection.
3. Glue the boards onto the tabletop using an adhesive like Liquid Nails. Then clamp the sides down while you fasten some screws on the table's underside.

High-end gold and marble shelves

Looking to add some glam in your life? This hack majorly transforms an ordinary glass shelf into a luxe unit for showcasing everything from books to accent pieces.

"We love this project for the simple ease of execution and the time factor," says Erin Lepperd of Style Me Pretty. "If you can spray paint and use scissors, you'll be a pro."

This faux high-end project is actually a totally budget-friendly piece. The transformation relies on gold spray paint and some marble contact paper— that's it. Lepperd adds that the whole shebang shouldn't cost more than $100.

How to pull it off:

1. Assemble the unit, then lay it outside on a drop cloth before applying three light coats of gold spray paint to the frame. Then let it dry for about half an hour.
2. Apply a mix of beige and natural marble contact paper to the shelves, then assemble the rest of the shelf per the instructions.

More condos in the South End?

The proposed redevelopment of Holy Trinity German Catholic Church in the South End has been given the go-ahead by the Boston Redevelopment Authority. The church, built in the 19th century, hasn't been used in five years, per The Boston Globe, and it's soon to become home to 33 condos. The design by Finegold Alexander Architects puts eight stories of condos inside the church, which will remain structurally independent, and adds a 28-car parking garage.

But is everyone in favor of the change? While the South End has long been trending toward the wealthy, the church itself was once home to charitable programs for the homeless and at-risk youth. "Do luxury condos at a South End church rip the soul out of Boston?" asked one recent Globe op-ed by Joan Vennochi. She also pointed out that the BRA is not requiring the building to include low-income housing because "no zoning variances were necessary." The building will join other high-end housing in the South End, such as the Ink Block development. LISA WEIDENFELD

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
You may be busy, but making time for a friend in need should take precedence. Your dependability and trustworthiness will be appreciated and will bring you unexpected rewards.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Look into your family tree. The things you learn about your lineage will help explain some of the current issues facing you and will give you insight into your future.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
You will fall behind if you underestimate your competition. Dig below the surface to find out the details that will lead you to victory.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Don't be too open about your dreams. You have a lot riding on being the best, and sharing your ideas will give someone the opportunity to steal your thunder.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Don't share personal information. Someone will use it to smear your reputation. Instead of being disappointed by someone, step up and take control of whatever situation you face.

♏ Scorpio |Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Reflecting on your past will give you an outline for what you need to do in the future. You will come out on top once you have your game plan in place.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
There is money to be made if you are savvy. Don't fork over any of your own cash on a risky investment. Be prudent and look for ways to increase your bank account and save money.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
You will be oversensitive today. Don't take everything to heart. Make personal changes that will amp up your confidence. Accept a social invitation and have a little fun.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Love is in a high cycle. Embrace any opportunity to increase your knowledge and broaden your job prospects. Lady Luck is smiling on you, and a great idea will turn into a prosperous venture.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Use your versatility and creativity to the maximum extent. Brainstorming with other successful individuals will give you insight into marketing trends.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
Your old friends may be jealous of a new acquaintance. Make sure to spend time with people who have always been in your corner.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
Your problems and concerns will mount if you don't listen to what others are saying and observe what they are doing. By exchanging ideas, you will find solutions. EUGENIA LAST

Many people would benefit from salt labels

Re: 'With a grain of salt' (Metro, June 16) Eva Kis starts out with a shaky argument against restaurant salt labeling when she compares it to proposals to ban large sodas. Obviously, providing information about food is a lot different than banning it. Seventy million Americans have high blood pressure, and for those people eating salt-laden restaurant meals risks their health.

What's wrong with providing the information that allows them to protect their health, while allowing everyone else to continue to eat what they want?
WALTER BRANSON, VIA EMAIL

Awareness is no bad thing for salt intake

Re: 'With a grain of salt' (Metro, June 16) A new salt labeling proposal is highly necessary. More than one-third of U.S. adults are obese or overweight.
We need to focus more on our health rather than what's going to make our foods taste good.

Humans were not created to consume the processed junk that is on the market today.

Processed foods are loaded with sodium.

Having salt labels would make people more aware of their nutrient consumption, which may result in better food choices. You also make it seem as if salt is the only seasoning that can make food taste good.

There are so many healthy seasonings on the market that can make home-cooked meals taste great (pepper, oregano, garlic, etc.).

If it's going to make me more aware, then I am for it.

MLB Power Rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Cardinals (42-21)

It's not surprising to see how much success the Cardinals have had this season given preseason expectations. What is surprising is the amount of success they've had with all the injuries. Adam Wainwright, Lance Lynn, Matt Holliday and Matt Adams have all gone down this year.

No. 2

Dodgers (37-27)

The Dodgers' plus-57 run-differential is the second best in the NL as they have opened a 3.5-game advantage in the NL West. Zach Greinke has picked up his play since April, owning a 1.95 ERA.

No. 3

Astros (37-28)

Houston has rebounded, winning two straight, but it has still dropped seven of 10. With the AL West being as poor as it is, the Astros still hold a 2.5-game division lead.

No. 4

Pirates (36-27)

Along with Gerrit Cole's dominance from the mound, Starling Marte's 45 RBIs are fifth in the NL. Pittsburgh has won seven of 10 but it is having trouble gaining any ground on St. Louis.

No. 5

Rays (36-29)

Don't look now but the Rays have won four straight and are now in first place in the AL East. Chris Archer has led the way with seven wins and a sparkling 2.00 ERA.

No. 6

Royals (35-25)

The Royals have played .500 ball of late but with the Twins struggling greatly, Kansas City has taken over the top spot in a competitive American League Central.

No. 7

Mets (35-30)

New York is back on top of the NL East standings as it has won two straight and for the year is 25-11 at home. They DFA'd pitcher Dillon Gee on Monday, probably a wise move.

No. 8

Cubs (34-27)

Like the Pirates, the Cubs can't gain ground on St. Louis. Jon Lester has been under some scrutiny for not yet performing like the ace he was assigned to be.

No. 9

Twins (34-29)

The Twins have fallen back to Earth, losing eight of their last 10 games to now trail the Royals by 2.5 games in the AL Central. Still, Glen Perkins leads all of baseball with 22 saves.

No. 10

Yankees (34-29)

Although the Yankees have fallen out of first place in the AL East, it doesn't mean they have played poorly of late. Mark Teixeira's 18 homers and 48 RBIs are the most in the American League.

No. 11

Rangers (34-30)

The Rangers looked like they were going nowhere in April but they're now just 2.5 games behind Houston. Prince Fielder's 45 RBIs are tied for third in the AL.

No. 12

Tigers (34-30)

Detroit has won six of their last 10, but remains three games behind the Royals and is in third place in the division. Miguel Cabrera's .344 average is tops in the AL, however.

Xander Bogaerts and Dustin Pedroia look to turn a double-play earlier this season. / GETTY IMAGES

Pedroia, Bogaerts the lone winners

MLB. The Red Sox's second baseman and shortstop have been the only bright spots.

Though the Red Sox have been a disaster of late — losing seven straight games going into Tuesday — there are two players, at least, doing everything they can to turn things around.

Dustin Pedroia and Xander Bogaerts aren't dogging it.

Collecting two hits Monday night, Pedroia extended his hit streak to six games and he's now hit safely in 15 straight home games, batting .413 in those contests. It's the longest single-season streak since Jacoby Ellsbury hit in 18 straight home games back in 2011.

Pedroia also was the only player to speak out on the state of the team following their team meeting prior to Monday's game. Though he may not be a vocal leader by nature, he's been forced into becoming one and has emerged as a clubhouse leader.

"That's the competitor he is," manager John Farrell said after Monday's game. "Couple of base hits, he gets on with a walk, on base three times. He gives you everything he's got every day he walks on the field."

For the season, Pedroia is batting .313, the highest on the team, and since being moved up to the leadoff spot — perhaps something he doesn't particularly like doing — he's hitting .368 with an on-base percentage of .406 in 23 games.

Bogaerts had his season-high nine-game hit streak snapped on Sunday, but remains one of the hottest hitters in the Sox lineup. He's even moved up to the No. 5 spot in the order, as Mike Napoli has dropped down to seventh.

In the month of June, Bogaerts has a slash line of .333/.357/.463.

It isn't just at the plate where Bogaerts has excelled this season, either. The shortstop looks like a completely different player from last season in the field as he has taken more control on pop-ups and generally appears more confident. He has also taken on a leadership role — as much as a player in his second full MLB season can. Bogaerts has been the defacto team spokesman through the trying times of late, being the one to speak to the media following losses.

Physician
Infectious Disease/Hospital Epidemiology

Dartmouth-Hitchcock (D-H) is seeking an exceptional Hospital Epidemiologist in the Section of Infectious Disease and International Health (IDIH) within the Department of Medicine. The successful candidate will have dedicated clinical, academic and research time as well as the opportunity to participate in the development of program initiatives across the Dartmouth-Hitchcock integrated system.

The Section of Infectious Disease and International Health at Dartmouth-Hitchcock consists of 12 faculty members together with many additional staff, including fellows, associate providers, research technicians, nurses, computer personnel, assistants, and administrative staff. We provide clinical and teaching services, infection control and antibiotic programs, research activities, and international programs.

The clinical services of our Section include Hospital-based and outpatient consultations for the full spectrum of infectious diseases of adults and children, an International Travel Clinic, a comprehensive Infection Control Program staffed by physician epidemiologists and infection preventionists, an Outpatient Parenteral Antibiotic Therapy program, and a Regional HIV Program, which provides multidisciplinary care to persons with HIV in Lebanon, Manchester, Nashua and Keene, N.H., and in Brattleboro, VT.

Qualified candidates must be BC/BE in Infectious Disease and be eligible for a New Hampshire medical license and to receive a faculty appointment at the Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth at a rank commensurate with experience. The successful candidate must also have active clinical and hospital epidemiology responsibilities, have a track record of working towards scholarly achievement, and possess excellent interpersonal and mentoring skills, as well as administrative ability.

Please submit CV and cover letter at www.dhproviders.org
Cover letter should be addressed to:

Bryan J. Marsh, MD
Infectious Disease and International Health

Dartmouth-Hitchcock is an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law.

TRUST CITATION

Docket No. SU15P1306PO

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court

Carmen Z Simpkins, III In the matter of:

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114
(617) 788-8300

To all interested persons:

A Petition has been filed by: Gerald B O'Grady, III of Boston MA and James L Smithson of Boston MA requesting the Court to 1. Exercise jurisdiction over this Trust solely for the purpose of addressing this Petition, without retaining jurisdiction or requiring the Trustees to file accounts with this Court. 2. Appoint a Guardian Ad Litem to represent the interests of the minor children and the interests of unborn or unascertained beneficiaries because otherwise available representation is inadequate due to conflicts of interest between the minors and unborn or unascertained beneficiaries and those who might represent them; and 3. Instruct the Trustees whether or not in making discretionary distributions of principal they must consider not only the needs of the particular beneficiary seeking a distribution, but also the size of the Trust, the extent of the other beneficiaries' existing needs, probable future needs of the beneficiaries and the existing and potential resources available to each beneficiary; and 4. Instruct the Trustees whether or not they are compelled to make distributions of principal from the Carmen Z. Simpkins Trust dated May 13, 1960 to the beneficiaries to ensure they enjoy the same standard of living to which they have become accustomed prior to the Settlor's death; and 5. Instruct the Trustees whether or not in making discretionary distributions of principal they are to consider the other resources available to the beneficiaries including their own income and assets; and 6. to enter such other relief as is right and just.

In the Alternative: 7. Exercise jurisdiction over this Trust solely for the purpose of addressing this Petition, without retaining jurisdiction or requiring the Trustees to file accounts with this Court. 8. Appoint a Guardian Ad Litem to represent the interests of the minor children and the interests of unborn or unascertained beneficiaries because otherwise available representation is inadequate due to conflicts of interest between the minors and unborn or unascertained beneficiaries and those who might represent them; and 9. Determine and declare that the Trustees in making discretionary distributions of principal may consider not only the needs of the particular beneficiary seeking a distribution, but also the size of the Trust, the extent of the other beneficiaries existing needs, probable future needs of the beneficiaries and the existing and potential resources available to each beneficiary; and 10. Determine and declare that the Trustees in making discretionary distributions of principal are to consider other resources available to the beneficiaries including their own income and assets; and/or 11. Modify the Trust in accordance with G.L ch. 203E §412, because of circumstances not anticipated by the Settlor which have arisen and the inability of the Trustees to otherwise administer the Trust effectively as a pooled trust, and divide the trust assets into four shares as of the date of the Settlor's death, one each for the four children of the Settlor and their descendants and determine and declare that they should administer the Trust accordingly; 12. And to enter such other relief as is right and just.

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before 10:00 a.m. on 07/02/2015. This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection if you object to this proceeding. If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an Affidavit of Objections within thirty (30) days of the return date, action may be taken without further notice to you.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.
